April 2015

Thank you for your interest in the Utah State University Alternative Teacher Preparation (ATP) Program. This program is for individuals who have a bachelors degree or above who would like to earn a teaching license with a special education endorsement. The ATP teacher certification program is a cooperative program whereby accepted candidates must be employed in a special education setting with a participating school district while taking coursework toward your special education licensure. School districts that participate in the Utah State University ATP program are Nebo, Provo, Alpine, Granite, Jordan, Canyons, Murray, Salt Lake City, Davis, Weber, Ogden, Box Elder, and Tooele and selected charter schools. We have several scheduled district-sponsored information meetings for all interested candidates. At that time we will describe the ATP programs and course requirements, minimum requirements to apply, the district hiring process in each of the participating school districts, and answer any questions you might have.
